In the early to mid 1880’s, U.S. Army Chaplain Winfield Scott visited the Salt River Valley. Returning with his wife, Helen, he purchased 640 acres for $3.50 an acre for a stretch of land where downtown Scottsdale is now located. Winfield and his brother were the first residents of the town which was known as Orangedale due to the large citrus groves planted by the Scott brothers. The town’s name was changed to Scottsdale in 1894, after its founder.

Common animals of the Sonoran Desert include: Bark Scorpion, Bobcat, Cactus Wren, Coyote, Desert Iguana, Gila Monster, Javelina, Mule Deer, Tarantula, Western Diamondback Snake

You can actually go to college in Scottsdale to earn a degree in being a cowboy. It’s called the Arizona Cowboy College where both kids and adults can go and become true western ranchers.

Be sure to stock up on sunscreen in this city—Scottsdale gets an astounding 314 days of sun a year.
